

FOLLOW YOUR INTELLECTUAL PASSIONS!

The Department of East Asian Languages & Cultures (EALC) at Indiana University is dedicated to studying the richness and diversity of China, Japan, and Korea—past and present. Located in the Hamilton Lugar School and supported by the resources of Indiana University, a leading R1 public research institution, EALC is one of the largest, most interdisciplinary East Asian studies departments in the United States!

FLEXIBILITY, DIVERSITY, OPPORTUNITY

Do you want to design a course of study tailored to your intellectual interests and passions? Our M.A. in East Asian Studies is the degree program for you! This flexible Master's degree offers as many study and research options as career paths. Our graduates go on to careers in business, government, NGOs, law, journalism, and further graduate study—to name but a few possible futures.

ENHANCE YOUR M.A. IN EAST ASIAN STUDIES WITH A DUAL DEGREE

Want to go beyond deep area knowledge of East Asia? Consider simultaneously pursuing your M.A. in East Asian Studies alongside a dual degree in business administration (MBA) with IU's world-renowned Kelley School or public affairs (MPA) with its nationally top-ranked O'Neill School. APPLY SEPARATELY

PASSIONATE & INTERDISCIPLINARY FACULTY

Our more than 30 faculty members are dedicated scholars, teachers, and practitioners who study East Asia from diverse disciplinary perspectives, including anthropology, business, diplomacy, gender studies, history, linguistics, literature, media studies, political science, sociology, and more.

GENEROUS FUNDING OPPORTUNITIES

We offer a range of funding opportunities for graduate students, including prestigious Foreign Language & Area Studies (FLAS) fellowships. These Department of Education-funded awards provide a generous stipend and tuition remission for the study of East Asian languages. Check out our website for more info!
